"Yes, French opera is definitely abandoned," said Manager Oscar Hammerstein, on Broadway yesterday. Time, which heals all wounds, had healed his very evidently, for he smiled in his usual ingenuous and roseate manner. "I was learning French," he said, "and had already mastered a number of phrases. I was practising calling all my ushers "monsteur," while I had positively determined to address the scrubwoman, Mrs. O'Brien, as Mme. O'Bree-ong. It has been a great blow to me, but I feel better now. I sent my last telegram to New Orleans Sunday, warping the people that I would have nothing that I had not contracted for. Well, the Mahattan Opera-House must stay closed for the prezent, I tis far better for it to do so, than to become identified with some stupid, second-rate attraction, such as I could possibly secure now. I have refused a dozen offers, because they did not sult me. I am losing money keeping the house shut, but I should lose more in the long run, if I opened it with what I do not want. My position is almost unprecedented. The nearest approach to it was that of the Broadway Theatre, a couple of years ago. The London Galety Company was to have opened there, but cancelled the Contract. Rather than remain closed the Broadway people put on 'Pippins' You remember that ghastly fathure. No 'Pippins' for me. I shall go to Europe soon, and then I will see what can be done.

Rumor says that there is trouble between Augustin Daly and Arthur Bourchier, the leading man, who replaced John Drew, Mr. Bourchier is not playing. He rehearsed the part of the Duke Orsino in "Twelfth Night" up to the very last moment, and was anxious to play it, for it is easy, and Mr. Bourchier has had plenty of hard work so fer. Before the first performance, however, Fourchier found a note from Mr. Daly saying that he would not be required for "Twelfth Night." His part was played by Cresion Clarke.

Hubert Wike did not appear at the matinee performance of "The Fencing Master" at the Casino Wednesday. Efforts have been made to secure Mme. Duse for Hammerstein's Harlem Opera-House, but as yet nothing has been settled. If she cannot play in Harlem this season, Mr. Hammerstein's patrons will see her next season. She is to return to this country.

"I see that Sig. De Vivo thinks it wonderful that Mme. Duse should allow Hose Coghian to be advertised at the Fifth Avenue Theatre during her tenancy of the house," said Charles Chatterton. of Henry E. Abbey's firm, yesterday, "Well, let me tell you that Bernhardt, when she was playing at the Standard, permitted Patti Rosa's announcements to stand there. Bernhardt was not in the least jealous of Patti Rosa. It is said that, when the Trying played at the Star he was followed by a troupe of educated monkeys. Towards the close of his engagement the monkeys were announced. Irving wasn't a bit jealous of them.

Wash't a bit jealous of them.

The Casino people send this enormously interesting piece of information: "The word 'Basoche' is pronounced as if spelled 'Bahsosch.'" This is probably for the benefit of those who might pronounce it as though spelled 'Baysock-ki." The real fille of the opera is "La Basoche." The 'La' is pronounced as though it were spelled 'lah." and not 'lay." As for 'Casino, avoid pronouncing it as though spelled 'Ca-seener." Mr. Duff is pronounced as though he were spelled Mr. "Dough."

"Aunt' Louisa Eldridge, who is to have a big benefit in April, was very indignant when the idea was first suggested to her. A benefit, forsooth? What for? A couple of 'Aunt' Louisa's friends talked to her for one long hour, and at the end of that time she gave her consent. The benefit will undoubtedly be a big success, for there is no flaw in Aunt Louisa's popularity.

"Something must be done in the way of setting the names of the great musical artists of the day to music," says a lester, "for it is simply impossible for the average linguist to pronounce them. Meet in the Arena.

It can now be stated positively that Charley Mitchell and James J Corrett will meet in the arena next December. Mitchell and brady have arrived at a perfect understanding, and i that is all the sport-loving jubile is apt to learn of the matter for the present at ica t. The Canadian trip has been abandoned, it is said, by mutual consent of the parties most interested. Mitchell was advised by Howe & Hummel yesterday that it would be just as serious a thing for him to sign the articles out of the State as within it.

Atter a brief chat with Mitchell last night, Manager Brady frankly admitted that his doubts as to the Englishman's eincerity were unfounded. He is now convinced that Mitchcember.

posting his $10,000 with Dave Blanchard. Mitchell distinctly told a reporter that he wouldn't go to Canada. It is plain that neither side cares to trifle with the police officials in the matter, and that may explain, in part, the muddle into which the preliminary proceedings have been drawn. Truth compels the statement that the affair is uncomminity close to the line separating fasco from fixture, and it needs only the sligntest impetus to carry the matter over the boundary to the wrong side.

The question of excluding all but under-graduates in the academical departments of colleges will come up for consideration at to-morrow's meeting of the intercollegiste Amateur Athletic Association of America. This is the rule which raised such a song and dance in rule University, being originally rejected at a mass-meeting of students, and finally, at another meeting, adopted, after the Facuity exercised its weird induced over the "undergrads."

Yale's delegates will offer the new rule at to-morrow's meeting, and the most formidable opponents will be Cornell, Wesleyan and University of Pennsylvania. It is accepted that Harvard and Frinceton will co-operate with Yale, and their influence among smaller colleges, like Swarthmore, may bring about the number of votes required to make the resolution a law in the I. It is just because Vale adopted the rule that led to the formation last night at New Haven of the Yale Law School Baseball Association. R. S. Baidwin, or '93, was elected President and Couse, '94, Secretary and Treasurer.

By the resignations last night of Trustees T.L.James and M.C.D. Borden of the proposed fund of $200,000, with which it was hoped to relieve the Manhattan A. C. from its pecuniary distress, the last straw wasswept away and the committee of Ways and Means was disbanded by a vote of 4 to 3.

Night work for bakers should be abolished. The Canadian Baker and Confectioner, which is published in the interest of the booses, has the following pertinent paragraph upon the subject in question: The whole system of night work is wrong, and has been shown to be unnecessary. There are shops in this country and abroad which have all their work done during the day, and find it an advaninge, not only to the men but to the proprietors. They get more and bette work done during the day than could be possible by night, and avoid the risks and dangers attendant upon the use of launes.
